

In the year the world was asked to make poverty history, come and find out how classical music can help do just that, and conserve threatened African forests at the same time...

Mpingo – the African Blackwood – is used to make clarinets and oboes, cor anglais and bagpipes, and is one of the most valuable timbers in the world. However it is being felled more quickly than it can grow back.

The Mpingo Conservation Project has been working since 1995 to improve the future prospects of woodwind music.

Since 2004 the project has raised over £200,000 from BP and the Darwin Initiative, our most successful years to date. We have established a permanent field base in Kilwa in southern Tanzania, where we are developing community forest management. Now we want to build on our success...

AFRICA MEETS CLASSICAL MUSIC

Come and celebrate our 10th birthday with us at a black tie dinner with music and presentations on 26th November 2005 at the place the project was born, Emmanuel College, Cambridge.

Tickets are £42 each
Cheques to "Mpingo Conservation Project"

UK Representative, Mpingo Conservation Project
23 Miswell Lane, Tring, HP23 4DD 01442 826104

anniversary-dinner@mpingoconservation.org
www.mpingoconservation.org

The MCP is a project of the Environment Africa Trust, charity number 1025443.

In the year the world was asked to make poverty history, come and find out how classical music can help do just that, and conserve threatened African forests at the same time...

Mpingo – the African Blackwood – is used to make clarinets and oboes, cor anglais and bagpipes, and is one of the most valuable timbers in the world. However it is being felled more quickly than it can grow back.

The Mpingo Conservation Project has been working since 1995 to improve the future prospects of woodwind music.

Since 2004 the project has raised over £200,000 from BP and the Darwin Initiative, our most successful years to date. We have established a permanent field base in Kilwa in southern Tanzania, where we are developing community forest management. Now we want to build on our success...

AFRICA MEETS CLASSICAL MUSIC

Come and celebrate our 10th birthday with us at a black tie dinner with music and presentations on 26th November 2005 at the place the project was born, Emmanuel College, Cambridge.

Tickets are £42 each
Cheques to "Mpingo Conservation Project"

UK Representative, Mpingo Conservation Project
23 Miswell Lane, Tring, HP23 4DD 01442 826104

anniversary-dinner@mpingoconservation.org
www.mpingoconservation.org

The MCP is a project of the Environment Africa Trust, charity number 1025443.

